Detroit Redford United Methodist Church

Records, 1927-1984 (2001)

History Note:

From 1832 to 1838, circuit riders held meetings in homes in the Bell Branch region of Redford Township. Around 1840, a meeting house was built to house these meetings. In 1882, services began at Duboisville. Ten years later, Duboisville Church was built. In 1912, the congregations of Bell Branch and Duboisville joined together and built Redford Methodist Episcopal Church. The church was later called Calvary Methodist Episcopal Church, then Calvary Methodist Church, and eventually became known as Redford United Methodist Church. In 1978, Detroit St. Matthew's United Methodist Church and Redford United Methodist Church combined congregations, staying in the Redford church building and keeping that name. Redford United Methodist Church merged into Aldersgate United Methodist Church in Redford, Michigan in 2005.
